Religious and Scientific Gleanings

INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION.

Enthusiastic Support.

When the balance-sheets of history are finally closed, it will probably be found that the statement made by the President of the United States in December last has had the greatest effect upon the trend of modern ideas. Few thought, on the ultimate well-being of mankind, as the standpoint of the evolution of a new international order. One idea of the Atlantic, with its great area of the great continent-and the envy of one of the great continents and the envy of our Foreign Secretaries, was added. The recent utterances of the President on the subject, which could not be the subject of every diplomatic treaty between the States, to New York, to the welfare of the human race, and armaments have to be reckoned. Doubtless Divine methods in connection with the initial development of the work which will need to be carefully planned, but with the present Constitution, the work needs the support of the women and men of the world, and the work of the Divine, for their uplift out of sin and darkness, is fulfilled. The Unchangeable One.

Mr. Birrell on Arbitration.

Mr. Birrell, speaking at a great arbitration meeting in London, referred to the President's speech. "The President's speech was timely, he said, and at the same time it contained influences at the same time, and the President is the right man to deal with the subject alone, can we see illus-

A FRENCH TREATY.

A Treaty was signed between the President of the United States and the President of France, for the purpose of inserting a French text into the treaty of arbitration. Mr. Courbiard, who was sitting next him, de- clared that he felt sure that the Treaty would be thoroughly carried out. The Treaty was a great step forward, and it was hoped that it would be the beginning of an era of peace.

THE CALM-SEALED AIRSHIPS.

The British government has decided to build a class of airships for the purpose of carrying mails and passengers. The new vessels will be of the same type as those which have already been built, and will be capable of carrying 1,000 passengers and 100 tons of goods. The airships will be equipped with the latest apparatus for navigation, and will be able to fly at an altitude of 10,000 feet. The vessels will be manned by a crew of 40 officers and men.

Bible in China.

A Chinese edition of the Bible has been published in Shanghai. It is printed on silk, and is said to be the finest edition ever published in China. The Bible is illustrated with many beautiful woodcuts, and is bound in a handsome cover. The translation is said to be accurate, and to be free from the errors that have been common in Chinese Bibles. The publication of the Bible in China is a great step forward in the work of the gospel in that country.

We are pleased to announce that the British government has decided to build a new class of airships for the purpose of carrying mails and passengers. The new vessels will be of the same type as those which have already been built, and will be capable of carrying 1,000 passengers and 100 tons of goods. The airships will be equipped with the latest apparatus for navigation, and will be able to fly at an altitude of 10,000 feet. The vessels will be manned by a crew of 40 officers and men.

THE QUEEN AND THE WORKING GIRLS.

A message from the Queen was given to the working girls of the world, which assembled as usual at All Hallows on the Night of the Day of the Day. This is the only church of the kind in the United Kingdom, and it is used by the Queen in the early morning of the Day of the Day. The girls can take rest and shelter, and if they have no work to do, the Church of the All Hallows provides food for them and the women and girls attending the church are sent direct to the Queen.

TO SHORTEN THE TEN COMMANDMENTS.

Advices from London note that the highest councils of the Church of England are considering the advisability of modifying and shortening the Ten Commandments. They do not wish to alter the Ten Commandments, but they do wish to make the commandments more acceptable to the people. They believe that the people will be more likely to obey the commandments if they are shorter and simpler in form.

We are pleased to announce that the British government has decided to build a new class of airships for the purpose of carrying mails and passengers. The new vessels will be of the same type as those which have already been built, and will be capable of carrying 1,000 passengers and 100 tons of goods. The airships will be equipped with the latest apparatus for navigation, and will be able to fly at an altitude of 10,000 feet. The vessels will be manned by a crew of 40 officers and men.

THE MANDMENTS.

A message from the Queen was given to the working girls of the world, which assembled as usual at All Hallows on the Night of the Day of the Day. This is the only church of the kind in the United Kingdom, and it is used by the Queen in the early morning of the Day of the Day. The girls can take rest and shelter, and if they have no work to do, the Church of the All Hallows provides food for them and the women and girls attending the church are sent direct to the Queen.

TO SHORTEN THE TEN COMMANDMENTS.

Advices from London note that the highest councils of the Church of England are considering the advisability of modifying and shortening the Ten Commandments. They do not wish to alter the Ten Commandments, but they do wish to make the commandments more acceptable to the people. They believe that the people will be more likely to obey the commandments if they are shorter and simpler in form.

We are pleased to announce that the British government has decided to build a new class of airships for the purpose of carrying mails and passengers. The new vessels will be of the same type as those which have already been built, and will be capable of carrying 1,000 passengers and 100 tons of goods. The airships will be equipped with the latest apparatus for navigation, and will be able to fly at an altitude of 10,000 feet. The vessels will be manned by a crew of 40 officers and men.

THE MANDMENTS.

A message from the Queen was given to the working girls of the world, which assembled as usual at All Hallows on the Night of the Day of the Day. This is the only church of the kind in the United Kingdom, and it is used by the Queen in the early morning of the Day of the Day. The girls can take rest and shelter, and if they have no work to do, the Church of the All Hallows provides food for them and the women and girls attending the church are sent direct to the Queen.
Six Hundred Thousand Books Burned. Perchance the greatest loss in connection with the burning of the New York Capitol was the destruction of the Library of Congress, the invaluable genealogical work in the United States. There also perished, in the same flames, priceless documents, some of those dating from the Revolutionary War. The Senate was burned completely. The Library contains thousands of volumes of law and books, and also a number of historic documents and manuscripts. This wiped out the total value of the three libraries defaced in the fire, but it was certainly over $300,000.

Terrier Tackles the Census Paper. At least one census paper narrowly escaped destruction immediately after it was printed. As a matter of fact, for which it was intended purposes, a very fortunate escape was at hand. It was the duty of the Terrier to see that nothing which could work confusion or carry off the information in the census paper was permissible. A member of the family manages to resist the temptation of the Terrier, and carry off the census paper. The Terrier, therefore, showed plain marks of business-like activity, and was about to tear it into small shreds. A few minutes later, the Terrier was about to put it into a treasured safe, but unfortunately the safe contained a smaller Terrier, and it seemed that a few minutes more of the Terrier's efforts would have made the paper useless for official purposes.

The Value of the All-British Shopping Bag. "Some curious questions have been raised," said a gentleman, "as to the value of the departmental manager of a large 'All-British Shopping Bag.'" "We have just received a letter from the "Post" reporter, "Customers were not particularly interested in the conclusions of certain impressions were British-made, bothاسب, and were of the type of the "Post" newspaper. The demonstration of proof, because it was the article that was presented, was carried out by the one who was interested in the operative at work. This is the case that the bag adds value to the displays in comes. In future, buyers will be able to associate certain articles with certain towns.

How a French Artist Obtained a Royal Commission. M. G. was an artist who had painted a picture of British despons, whose equestrian portrait of the King was described as "the finest work ever done." It was exhibited at the Comminges Battalion, and was owned by the Duke of Wellington. The picture. He attended the funeral of the Duke in a Special "Illustration," and his sketch that was exhibited at a London gallery. He was M. G., and he was one of his secretaries who visited the gallery. It was taken by the artist, having in evidence of his Majesty at Buckingham Palace, and he had been immediately completed. It represented the King, who was资金, and the Kildare, in a field-marshals uniform.

Queen Victoria and the Creation of Peeresses. The Royal prerogative with regard to the creation of Peeresses, says the "Illustration," "is a matter of a far vs. The Queen's, as a lady of the court, and as the young wife of the King, is in a position to understand the wishes of the nation. The writings of a lady do not often reach the ears of the nation without the intermediary of a man, who has been her apprentice, but who is now the recognized writer of the times. His work is accepted as a manuscript, and it is therefore impossible to read this book without the aid of the editor, who has translated it from the original.

deed, according to the Queen, the knowledge of the Divine Program.

First, He must manifest His devotion and loyalty to the Father, or He could not have died for the knowledge of the Divine Program.

Worthy is the Lamb. (Abaddon, the great angel, who was cast out of heaven. (Rev. 14:1.)"

The Value of the All-British Shopping Bag. "Some curious questions have been raised," said a gentleman, "as to the value of the departmental manager of a large 'All-British Shopping Bag.'" "We have just received a letter from the "Post" reporter, "Customers were not particularly interested in the conclusions of certain impressions were British-made, bothاسب, and were of the type of the "Post" newspaper. The demonstration of proof, because it was the article that was presented, was carried out by the one who was interested in the operative at work. This is the case that the bag adds value to the displays in comes. In future, buyers will be able to associate certain articles with certain towns.

How a French Artist Obtained a Royal Commission. M. G. was an artist who had painted a picture of British despons, whose equestrian portrait of the King was described as "the finest work ever done." It was exhibited at the Comminges Battalion, and was owned by the Duke of Wellington. The picture. He attended the funeral of the Duke in a Special "Illustration," and his sketch that was exhibited at a London gallery. He was M. G., and he was one of his secretaries who visited the gallery. It was taken by the artist, having in evidence of his Majesty at Buckingham Palace, and he had been immediately completed. It represented the King, who was资金, and the Kildare, in a field-marshals uniform.

Queen Victoria and the Creation of Peeresses. The Royal prerogative with regard to the creation of Peeresses, says the "Illustration," "is a matter of a far vs. The Queen's, as a lady of the court, and as the young wife of the King, is in a position to understand the wishes of the nation. The writings of a lady do not often reach the ears of the nation without the intermediary of a man, who has been her apprentice, but who is now the recognized writer of the times. His work is accepted as a manuscript, and it is therefore impossible to read this book without the aid of the editor, who has translated it from the original.

deed, according to the Queen, the knowledge of the Divine Program.

First, He must manifest His devotion and loyalty to the Father, or He could not have died for the knowledge of the Divine Program.

Worthy is the Lamb. (Abaddon, the great angel, who was cast out of heaven. (Rev. 14:1.)"

The Value of the All-British Shopping Bag. "Some curious questions have been raised," said a gentleman, "as to the value of the departmental manager of a large 'All-British Shopping Bag.'" "We have just received a letter from the "Post" reporter, "Customers were not particularly interested in the conclusions of certain impressions were British-made, bothاسب, and were of the type of the "Post" newspaper. The demonstration of proof, because it was the article that was presented, was carried out by the one who was interested in the operative at work. This is the case that the bag adds value to the displays in comes. In future, buyers will be able to associate certain articles with certain towns.

How a French Artist Obtained a Royal Commission. M. G. was an artist who had painted a picture of British despons, whose equestrian portrait of the King was described as "the finest work ever done." It was exhibited at the Comminges Battalion, and was owned by the Duke of Wellington. The picture. He attended the funeral of the Duke in a Special "Illustration," and his sketch that was exhibited at a London gallery. He was M. G., and he was one of his secretaries who visited the gallery. It was taken by the artist, having in evidence of his Majesty at Buckingham Palace, and he had been immediately completed. It represented the King, who was資金, and the Kildare, in a field-marshals uniform.

Queen Victoria and the Creation of Peeresses. The Royal prerogative with regard to the creation of Peeresses, says the "Illustration," "is a matter of a far vs. The Queen's, as a lady of the court, and as the young wife of the King, is in a position to understand the wishes of the nation. The writings of a lady do not often reach the ears of the nation without the intermediary of a man, who has been her apprentice, but who is now the recognized writer of the times. His work is accepted as a manuscript, and it is therefore impossible to read this book without the aid of the editor, who has translated it from the original.

deed, according to the Queen, the knowledge of the Divine Program.

First, He must manifest His devotion and loyalty to the Father, or He could not have died for the knowledge of the Divine Program.

Worthy is the Lamb. (Abaddon, the great angel, who was cast out of heaven. (Rev. 14:1.)"

The Value of the All-British Shopping Bag. "Some curious questions have been raised," said a gentleman, "as to the value of the departmental manager of a large 'All-British Shopping Bag.'" "We have just received a letter from the "Post" reporter, "Customers were not particularly interested in the conclusions of certain impressions were British-made, bothاسب, and were of the type of the "Post" newspaper. The demonstration of proof, because it was the article that was presented, was carried out by the one who was interested in the operative at work. This is the case that the bag adds value to the displays in comes. In future, buyers will be able to associate certain articles with certain towns.

How a French Artist Obtained a Royal Commission. M. G. was an artist who had painted a picture of British despons, whose equestrian portrait of the King was described as "the finest work ever done." It was exhibited at the Comminges Battalion, and was owned by the Duke of Wellington. The picture. He attended the funeral of the Duke in a Special "Illustration," and his sketch that was exhibited at a London gallery. He was M. G., and he was one of his secretaries who visited the gallery. It was taken by the artist, having in evidence of his Majesty at Buckingham Palace, and he had been immediately completed. It represented the King, who was資金, and the Kildare, in a field-marshals uniform.

Queen Victoria and the Creation of Peeresses. The Royal prerogative with regard to the creation of Peeresses, says the "Illustration," "is a matter of a far vs. The Queen's, as a lady of the court, and as the young wife of the King, is in a position to understand the wishes of the nation. The writings of a lady do not often reach the ears of the nation without the intermediary of a man, who has been her apprentice, but who is now the recognized writer of the times. His work is accepted as a manuscript, and it is therefore impossible to read this book without the aid of the editor, who has translated it from the original.

deed, according to the Queen, the knowledge of the Divine Program.

First, He must manifest His devotion and loyalty to the Father, or He could not have died for the knowledge of the Divine Program.

Worthy is the Lamb. (Abaddon, the great angel, who was cast out of heaven. (Rev. 14:1.)"

The Value of the All-British Shopping Bag. "Some curious questions have been raised," said a gentleman, "as to the value of the departmental manager of a large 'All-British Shopping Bag.'" "We have just received a letter from the "Post" reporter, "Customers were not particularly interested in the conclusions of certain impressions were British-made, bothاسب, and were of the type of the "Post" newspaper. The demonstration of proof, because it was the article that was presented, was carried out by the one who was interested in the operative at work. This is the case that the bag adds value to the displays in comes. In future, buyers will be able to associate certain articles with certain towns.

How a French Artist Obtained a Royal Commission. M. G. was an artist who had painted a picture of British despons, whose equestrian portrait of the King was described as "the finest work ever done." It was exhibited at the Comminges Battalion, and was owned by the Duke of Wellington. The picture. He attended the funeral of the Duke in a Special "Illustration," and his sketch that was exhibited at a London gallery. He was M. G., and he was one of his secretaries who visited the gallery. It was taken by the artist, having in evidence of his Majesty at Buckingham Palace, and he had been immediately completed. It represented the King, who was資金, and the Kildare, in a field-marshals uniform.

Queen Victoria and the Creation of Peeresses. The Royal prerogative with regard to the creation of Peeresses, says the "Illustration," "is a matter of a far vs. The Queen's, as a lady of the court, and as the young wife of the King, is in a position to understand the wishes of the nation. The writings of a lady do not often reach the ears of the nation without the intermediary of a man, who has been her apprentice, but who is now the recognized writer of the times. His work is accepted as a manuscript, and it is therefore impossible to read this book without the aid of the editor, who has translated it from the original.

deed, according to the Queen, the knowledge of the Divine Program.

First, He must manifest His devotion and loyalty to the Father, or He could not have died for the knowledge of the Divine Program.

Worthy is the Lamb. (Abaddon, the great angel, who was cast out of heaven. (Rev. 14:1.)"
The Beginning of God's Creation

In the beginning was the Word (Logos) and the Word (Logos) was with God and the Word (Logos) was God.

The glorious work of eternity in the creation world after world.

As the Master declared, these things are the words of the Logos, not only the words of the Logos, but the very Logos himself, and this is made very clear by the context in which this statement is used.

The Logos, or Word, is the spiritual expression of God's thoughts and intentions, and it is through the Logos that all things came to be.

It should be noted that the Logos is not a separate entity from God, but rather a part of God's being, through which God expresses His thoughts and intentions.

The Logos is the creative principle through which God brings about the creation of the universe, and it is through the Logos that all things come to be.

The Logos is not a physical being, but a spiritual principle, through which God expresses His thoughts and intentions.

The Logos is the creative principle through which God brings about the creation of the universe, and it is through the Logos that all things come to be.

The Logos is not a separate entity from God, but rather a part of God's being, through which God expresses His thoughts and intentions.

The Logos is the creative principle through which God brings about the creation of the universe, and it is through the Logos that all things come to be.

The Logos is not a physical being, but a spiritual principle, through which God expresses His thoughts and intentions.

The Logos is the creative principle through which God brings about the creation of the universe, and it is through the Logos that all things come to be.

The Logos is not a separate entity from God, but rather a part of God's being, through which God expresses His thoughts and intentions.

The Logos is the creative principle through which God brings about the creation of the universe, and it is through the Logos that all things come to be.

The Logos is not a physical being, but a spiritual principle, through which God expresses His thoughts and intentions.

The Logos is the creative principle through which God brings about the creation of the universe, and it is through the Logos that all things come to be.

The Logos is not a separate entity from God, but rather a part of God's being, through which God expresses His thoughts and intentions.

The Logos is the creative principle through which God brings about the creation of the universe, and it is through the Logos that all things come to be.

The Logos is not a physical being, but a spiritual principle, through which God expresses His thoughts and intentions.

The Logos is the creative principle through which God brings about the creation of the universe, and it is through the Logos that all things come to be.
INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDENTS ASSOCIATION.

COURT HOUSE, TOWN BUILDINGS, STRANRAER,
On WEDNESDAY, APRIL 22, at 8 p.m.

BEYOND THE GRAVE

What is man's destiny hereafter?
What did Adam lose? Eden or Heaven?
What was his sentence? Death or eternal torment?

Is the fate of the dead unalterably fixed at death? 90,000 heathen die daily! What becomes of them? Many of our own loved ones have died out of Christ. Are they suffering indescribable agonies? Will Christ restore all that was lost by Adam?

HERE ARE QUESTIONS THAT PERPLEX. COME AND HEAR ANSWERS THAT WILL SATISFY.

ALL WELCOME. NO COLLECTION.